Revolution Spreads in Central America

El Salvador police and army troops opened fire on 5,000 marchers on September 14, killing five and wounding fifty. Forty people were reported missing. Some of the demonstrators returned the fire with handguns and the marchers retreated to the University of Salvador, burning fifteen government cars along the way.

Immediately after the police attacked, El Salvador dictator Carlos Humberto Romero canceled the Independence Day celebration planned for the next day. Nevertheless, 2,500 people defied government orders and marched on Independence Day in a funeral procession for two revolutionary teachers murdered by police in a demonstration earlier in the week.

This new wave of mass struggle and vicious government repression in El Salvador has the U.S. government extremely worried that they will not be able to maintain their grip on strategically important Central America. Already severely shaken by the overthrow of their man Somoza in Nicaragua, they are desperate to find a way to prevent revolution in El Salvador.

Further disconcerting has been inroads by the Soviet Union in the region as indicated by recent reports of Cuban aid to Nicaragua.

The Romero government announced last week it will hold elections for low level officers next year. But the U.S. is afraid that will not be sufficient to defuse the struggle. They have sent two of their top level diplomats, Asst. Secretary of State Viron Vaky and William Bowdler (former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador and Guatemala), scurrying between Central America and Washington in a frantic effort to convince the Romero regime to move the presidential elections, now scheduled for 1982, up to next year. Otherwise, according to Vaky, the government will fall to “insurrectionary violence.”

Speaking to the House Inter-American Affairs sub-committee, Vaky said, “The central issue is not whether change is to occur, but whether that change is to be violent and radical—or peaceful and evolutionary... the prospects for avoiding insurrectionary violence are rapidly dimming.”

The U.S. hope is that if a few reforms are carried out, and the U.S. government will create illusions among the Salvadoran people that problems can be solved peacefully and they will reject armed revolution. Of course, it’s not that the U.S. government rejects all violence; in spite of its “human rights” refusal to sell arms directly to El Salvador, the U.S. continues to funnel weapons through Israel to the Central American Defense Council of which El Salvador is a member. The Romero government used those weapons to kill thirty demonstrators in direct response to El Salvador, the U.S. government has its way, the case of the United States of America vs. ROBERT B. AVAKIAN et al. will be tried in November as a criminal case—under the guise of prosecuting or putting away these revolutionaries. Yet they stick like leeches to their blood-thirsty claim, made by the D.A., that “the charges against them describe what they did.” In other words, 241 years’ worth of felonies is not political! They want to have their cake and eat it too: to carry out one of the biggest political frame-ups in history and in the process to hit this country in years—likely to develop into the biggest—under the guise of prosecuting ordinary criminals on multiple criminal charges.

Into this scenario, lawyers for the defense launched a major legal offensive last August 27, challenging the prosecution’s case against these defendants and dragging into the light of day the political forces working over time behind the scenes to railroad Bob Avakian and send the 17 defendants to jail for 241 years. The package of pre-trial defense motions delivered that day the political forces working over time behind the scenes to railroad Bob Avakian and send the 17 defendants to jail for 241 years. The package of pre-trial defense motions delivered that day the political forces working over time behind the scenes to railroad Bob Avakian and send the 17 defendants to jail for 241 years. The package of pre-trial defense motions delivered that day.
That's right. He then sent the D.A. authorities—apparently a permit is not required to spread opportunism and reformist illusions among the masses.

The trial dealt with Hampton Homes.

The honored reprieves Pfaff also included in the sentence that the two revolutionaries were banned from even standing within 500 feet of the targeted projects for two years because of the role that the Revolutionary Communist Party has played in the projects where an intense struggle against the police has been going on for several years. It began on July 20 when 30 police bust up a disco that night in the projects, beat up a Black youth, Shelton Lucas, and mac- hed him while he was handcuffed. Two hundred youths showed the cops with rocks and bottles, driving the cops wild. They ordered, "You niggers and monkeys get inside," using nightsticks and guns to press their point, and arrested another youth for inciting to riot. The Revolutionary Communist Party put up a leaflet up the actions of the youths against the cops, and this leaflet was taken up by the people in the projects and distributed and discussed by the people of Hampton Homes. When six cops came to bust up another disco that night, they found themselves literally run out of the projects. When the cops ordered the youth to disperse, one youth read aloud the headline from the leaflet, "Dogs in Blue Unleashed on Hampton Homes." One cop turned to the other and said, "We better get the hell out of here!"

For weeks afterwards, the cops didn't know where the next time they were to bust into the project, they would be met with a rock in the back or worse. One evening patrol cars were driven away by youths throwing rocks at both ends of the main street going into Hampton Homes. One cop who unwisely turned his back while questioning someone was staggered by a rock. The message to the police was clear—stay off the streets! With no project leaders they gave up on the project. Several people began tak- ing the Revolutionary Worker out to sell to their friends. One guy urged his friends to buy the paper saying, "This paper is bad. It tells the truth.

Many people in the projects did not believe that the people busted during the rebellion would actually be convicted of the outrageous charges, let alone given heavy sentences. But on August 2, "Bird" Hayes, the youth charged with inciting to riot and charged by Judge Pfaff, given a suspended sentence with five years probation and was ordered by the court to get "mental help." "Bird" Hayes should be aware that the thing he has ever done in his whole life the night of the disco rebellion—he stood up against the pigs!

The authorities in Greensboro were running for the Revolutionary Worker. Events were making it clear to them that the Party was not just marching in the Hampton Homes tinderbox, but a Party that is serious about leading the masses to revolution. On August 12, they got their first clear shot. A white cop bust up Hopkins and Day selling papers in the projects. Giving them a citation was not enough; he called for the assistance of a Black cop who helped them. "What are you whites doing in our community?" The revolutionaries were able to talk to the cop. "Are you not doing here, pigs?" Some people who had been listening to a tape of Bob Avakian's May Day speech in one of the apartments in Hampton Homes ran outside to confront the cop and played it in the cop's ear. This obviously made quite an impression on the cop who later whined in the courtroom about how the people were agitating against him and "playing this revolutionary song.

On August 28, the attacks intensified. Shelton Lucas went to Judge Pfaff's court for the ridiculous "crime" of assault on a law enforce- ment officer. The judge sentenced him to 30 to 90 days in jail. (During the rebellion when a cop pulled a gun on Lucas, he had handed the cop his cigarette lighter to show that he was unarmed.) People in the courtroom were prepared for Pfaff's guilty verdict based on the trial of "Bird" Hayes, but the incredible sentence of 12 months actually came as a surprise. People shocked and outraged. Pfaff sat smugly and the cops and the prosecutor shook hands with hideous glee on their twisted faites. It was obvious that Lucas had not been sentenced for assault on an officer which he never did in the first place but for the "crime" of working with the RCP in protecting and agitating against the arrests after the rebellion.

The latest conviction of the two newspaper sellers in a further attempt to cripple the Party and the people by robbing them of their key weapon, the Revolutionary Worker. In the May Day tape that was playing in Hampton Homes near the time of the arrest, Bob Avakian says, "This is a system that is a great teacher, if you don't learn the first time, it will be glad to teach you a second time, a third time, a fourth time, and so on until you learn." But the problem for Pfaff and Co is that the lesson they are teaching the people of Greensboro only points out more clearly the picture of capitalist society that springs from the pages of the Revolu- tionary Worker—that behind all the garble of "democracy, justice and inno- cence before proven guilty"—is a nothing but conspiracy and dictatorship against the people. Whether banned or legal the Revolutionary Worker will continue to pass from hand to hand among the people of Greensboro, North Carolina.

---

Region Wide Conferences

On Two Issues Most Vital to Our Class

At the end of September and the beginning of October, hundreds of workers, veterans, youth and others will gather in each of several locales to come to grips with some serious questions facing the working class. They will discuss and debate and make preparations to really get into motion and get out the word about those two decisive battles that will be developing in the months ahead:

Free the Mao Tsetung Defendants!

Stop the Railroad of Bob Avakian! and

May Day 1980

East Coast—Washington D.C., Saturday, Sept. 29 (212) 924-4387
California & Southwest—Los Angeles, 9am Saturday, Sept. 29, UCLA, 39 Haines Hall (213) 585-8234
Hawaii—Honolulu, Sam Sunday, Sept. 30, Kalihi-Palama Library (808) 845-2733
Northwest—Seattle, noon, Sunday, Sept. 30, Jefferson Park Community Center, 3801 Beacon Ave. S., (206) 723-8439
South—Birmingham, noon, Saturday, Oct. 6, Miles College Student Union
Midwest-Great Lakes Area—Cincinnati, 1pm Saturday, Oct. 6 (513) 524-5124

For more information, call above phone numbers or your local Revolutionary Worker (see listing on page 4).

Sponsored by:

Revolutionary Communist Party
National United Workers Organization
Unemployed Workers Organizing Committee
Vietnam Veterans Against the War
Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade
On September 13, Lolita Lebron, Oscar Collazo, Irving Flores Rodriquez and Rafael Cancel-Miranda, the four Puerto Rican nationalists recently released from 25 years in U.S. prisons, stepped off a plane into their homeland and into a sea of Puerto Rican flags and banners. Thousands came out to greet them, filled with determination to continue the struggle against U.S. imperialism. Young leftists passed out leaflets calling for armed struggle. As the plane touched down, the crowd tore down airport fences and surged forward, chanting “Viva Puerto Rican Libres!” Irving Flores Rodriquez addressed the crowd and proudly declared that liberty “has to be conquered by blood and fire...our rights are not to be begged but fought for.”

Puerto Rican Governor Romero Barcelo, who had opposed the release of the four prisoners, had already fled for a visit to the mainland to avoid the embarrassment of their return. As the four walked through the airport, they were received reaching out to clasp the hands of the masses, police nervously held on to them from being lifted up on the shoulders of the people. But they were not going to stop this welcome, not only by people from San Juan, but from towns and cities all over Puerto Rico, they were already counting on the thousands of people waiting. Everybody had flags and banners. There were people from the countryside, workers from the city, students, everybody was there.

“Lolita and the others all talked and they said what people had to do. They said they were happy to be out of jail because they meant they could be active in the struggle. They told us not to be fooled, that the old colonial situation still remains and the struggle still remains. They said they didn’t return to be the great leaders, but to be part of the people in their struggle for independence.”

“When we left the airport, we headed out to the cemetery, the place where Pedro Albizu Campos is buried. The four went to pay respects to this revolutionary Parly. All along the road people were happy, that’s what I heard. People were happy both about the presence of the people and its leaders can do that.”

On September 17 the four attended a picket line denouncing the arrest and charges against 14 Puerto Rican nationalists. These men took part in a militant demonstration against the use and destruction of the island of Vieques by the U.S. military. The four continue to stand firm against imperialism. And they have announced they will be part of the solidarity between the people in their struggle for independence though short-lived and independent though short-lived.

“Lolita Lebron speaking to the large crowd that turned out to greet the four nationalists at the San Juan airport on Sept. 13th.”

This species, though antiquated, is known for its remarkable ability to adapt to changing conditions. It has been observed down through the ages in a variety of habitats, from the densest forests to the highest peaks of the mountains. Its ability to change shape in response to external stimuli has made it a favorite of scientists for centuries. It is also known for its incredible ability to withstand harsh conditions, from extreme heat to freezing cold. Despite its many adaptations, the Popus Roachus is still a mystery to scientists, and much more research is needed to fully understand its remarkable abilities.

This was the first of several secret tests of biological warfare material conducted recently.

A massive outbreak of pneumonia in and around San Francisco shortly after the tests prompted officials to put a lid on the whole thing, which has kept it secret for nearly 30 years.

The second secret test came from Europe where NATO Supreme Commander General Bernard Rivers, stated recently that, while the U.S. bloc is making advances in some areas of chemical and biological warfare, “We are in very bad shape in respect to chemical warfare readiness.”

One would assume new secret tests are in order. In another seemingly unrelated item, unusually thick smog has plagued Los Angeles in recent weeks. . .
An incident highlighting the plight of Mexican immigrant workers in this country, as well as the U.S. government's unoffical policy toward them, has been in the news recently. A little more than three years ago, Bernabe Mata, Manuel Loy and Eleazar Hernandez pleaded to the local court of Agua Prieta to work in the fields of Elfrida, Arizona. The commissioner followed a well-worn path forged through the scorching desert by thousands and thousands before them. Two hours into the United States' land, the workers came face to face with Tom Hanigan, the foreman of a wealthy Douglas, Arizona businessman and registered agent. Hanigan, armed with a shotgun, ordered the trio into a camper truck and drove them to Agua Prieta. Loy and Zavala thought that Hanigan would phone La Migra and they would be sent back to Mexico like the million other Mexican workers seized in 1976 by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS). But the Hanigans had another form of terror in mind.

Tom, his brother Pat, and his father George Hanigan drove the workers out into the desert, as one by one they were bound and stripped naked in the August sun. The ranchers used branding irons to burn the soles of Mata's feet. They threatened to castrate the trio and drew blood in the perforated at.

A rope was tied around Zavala's neck and he was thrown into a small canyon; he survived by desperately clinging to the rocky edge of the crevice. Failing in murder, the Hanigans sent the three to Agua Prieta, Mexico, ahead of a volley of shotgun blasts. In Agua Prieta, doctors removed 125 shotgun pellet wounds. Twenty-three percent of a test group of American males appear to have decreasing there also. DuPoni, Dow, and Corcoran; this is the American chemical industry bringing you a sterile tomorrow.

Carter administration is trying to figure out a way to gel Mexican-Americans into the fold. Or maybe the government is merely asking that they show up at the trial.

A little more than three years ago, David Hanigan of the Ku Klux Klan, helped to create the conditions that resulted in the Hanigans trying to "burgle our ranch." This phony excuse was laughable if it were not for the all too real vicious brutality that is continually inflicted by INS and police agents against Mexicans. In just one example, a Mexican worker was shot in the back while in the custody of an INS agent just last June 20. The U.S. District Attorney refused to prosecute, declaring the murder "justifiable homicide."

Recently, the Justice Department announced that it was impaneling a new federal grand jury to reopen the investigation of the Hanigan case. This is not the first time that the government has beenรายงาน into a case that may be part of a larger pattern of attempts to bolster up various reformed Chicano organizations as these people's struggles into "proper legal channels" grows increasingly exposed.

Sterile Living Through Chemistry

This is the American chemical industry bringing a sterile tomorrow. Dr. Ralph Dougherty gave the American Chemical Society a bit of bad news last week. In the course of 1,000 studies, the Florida chemist reported, the sperm count and potential fertility of American males appear to have declined sharply in recent years. Twenty-three percent of a test group of Americans males appear to have declined sharply in recent years. Twenty-three percent of a test group showed up as functionally sterile. Analysis of samples taken in the studies revealed the presence of PCB and DDT. Literally millions of pounds of PCB were manufactured in chemical factories until 1976, when its cancerous effects became so well known that the government was forced to ban it. DDT, the original wonder pesticide, was banned only after massive organizing. Of course, only once the chemical industry had another product ready to replace it to keep the cash register ringing.

Dougherty pointed to a "little known by-product of PCB" as "entirely likely and responsible" for lowering the sperm count. The chemist also reported that unions that have won for European and British suggested that the sperm count is decreasing there also. Dougherty, in testimony before an all-white jury, the Hanigans were found innocent of all charges.

At that point, a number of Chicano groups asked the U.S. Department of Justice to discontinue the charges against the Hanigans. The Justice Department refused, citing laws that "protect the civil rights of illegal aliens only while in the custody of police officers." This statement would be laughable if it were not for the all too real vicious brutality that is continually inflicted by INS and police agents against Mexicans.

An incident highlighting the plight of Mexican immigrant workers in this country, as well as the U.S. government's unoffical policy toward them, has been in the news recently. A little more than three years ago, Bernabe Mata, Manuel Loy and Eleazar Hernandez pleaded to the local court of Agua Prieta to work in the fields of Elfrida, Arizona. The commissioner followed a well-worn path forged through the scorching desert by thousands and thousands before them. Two hours into the United States' land, the workers came face to face with Tom Hanigan, the foreman of a wealthy Douglas, Arizona businessman and registered agent. Hanigan, armed with a shotgun, ordered the trio into a camper truck and drove them to Agua Prieta. Loy and Zavala thought that Hanigan would phone La Migra and they would be sent back to Mexico like the million other Mexican workers seized in 1976 by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS). But the Hanigans had another form of terror in mind.

Tom, his brother Pat, and his father George Hanigan drove the workers out into the desert, as one by one they were bound and stripped naked in the August sun. The ranchers used branding irons to burn the soles of Mata's feet. They threatened to castrate the trio and drew blood in the perforated at.

A rope was tied around Zavala's neck and he was thrown into a small canyon; he survived by desperately clinging to the rocky edge of the crevice. Failing in murder, the Hanigans sent the three to Agua Prieta, Mexico, ahead of a volley of shotgun blasts. In Agua Prieta, doctors removed 125 shotgun pellet wounds. Twenty-three percent of a test group of American males appear to have decreasing there also. DuPoni, Dow, and Corcoran; this is the American chemical industry bringing you a sterile tomorrow.

Carter administration is trying to figure out a way to gel Mexican-Americans into the fold. Or maybe the government is merely asking that they show up at the trial.

A little more than three years ago, David Hanigan of the Ku Klux Klan, helped to create the conditions that resulted in the Hanigans trying to "burgle our ranch." This phony excuse was laughable if it were not for the all too real vicious brutality that is continually inflicted by INS and police agents against Mexicans. In just one example, a Mexican worker was shot in the back while in the custody of an INS agent just last June 20. The U.S. District Attorney refused to prosecute, declaring the murder "justifiable homicide."

Recently, the Justice Department announced that it was impaneling a new federal grand jury to reopen the investigation of the Hanigan case. This is not the first time that the government has been Reported into a case that may be part of a larger pattern of attempts to bolster up various reformed Chicano organizations as these people's struggles into "proper legal channels" grows increasingly exposed.

Sterile Living Through Chemistry

This is the American chemical industry bringing a sterile tomorrow. Dr. Ralph Dougherty gave the American Chemical Society a bit of bad news last week. In the course of 1,000 studies, the Florida chemist reported, the sperm count and potential fertility of American males appear to have declined sharply in recent years. Twenty-three percent of a test group showed up as functionally sterile. Analysis of samples taken in the studies revealed the presence of PCB and DDT. Literally millions of pounds of PCB were manufactured in chemical factories until 1976, when its cancerous effects became so well known that the government was forced to ban it. DDT, the original wonder pesticide, was banned only after massive organizing. Of course, only once the chemical industry had another product ready to replace it to keep the cash register ringing.

Dougherty pointed to a "little known by-product of PCB" as "entirely likely and responsible" for lowering the sperm count. The chemist also reported that unions that have won for European and British suggested that the sperm count is decreasing there also. Dougherty, in testimony before an all-white jury, the Hanigans were found innocent of all charges.

At that point, a number of Chicano groups asked the U.S. Department of Justice to discontinue the charges against the Hanigans. The Justice Department refused, citing laws that "protect the civil rights of illegal aliens only while in the custody of police officers." This statement would be laughable if it were not for the all too real vicious brutality that is continually inflicted by INS and police agents against Mexicans. In just one example, a Mexican worker was shot in the back while in the custody of an INS agent just last June 20. The U.S. District Attorney refused to prosecute, declaring the murder "justifiable homicide."

Recently, the Justice Department announced that it was impaneling a new federal grand jury to reopen the investigation of the Hanigan case. This is not the first time that the government has been Reported into a case that may be part of a larger pattern of attempts to bolster up various reformed Chicano organizations as these people's struggles into "proper legal channels" grows increasingly exposed.
The secret behind this bizarre situation lies with what Palacios calls "the real motivations behind the two basic formulations, the two pillars of the Chilen CP's strategy that were decisive in this experience: the so-called 'peaceful road' to power, and the efforts to achieve a sort of 'historic compromise' with the leaders of the pro-Yankee Popular Units (particularly those of the 'CP') who claim to be Marxists is even more paradoxical if we consider that the reactionary opposition forces, together with the CTA, developed their offensive against the Allende government with tactics much closer to 'Marxist' tactics than those of the so-called Marxis who combined legal and illegal struggle..."

Fillers of CP Strategy

The publication of a U.S. edition of this book by Jorge Palacios, a founder and leading member of the Revolutionary Communist Party of Chile, throws a new light on all the questions that have been a mystery for many people: why the U.S. ruling class overthrew the government of Salvador Allende, a nacked act of aggression which cost the lives of far more people than anyone knew for months and by who it was done. As it turned out, the U.S. ruling class did not rely on a coup nor keep the U.S.-backed military forces. In some of the factories which rose up, in the poblaciones (squatters' camps) and farms that peasants had given over to the armed forces which they had always seen. In Santiago alope, almost a million people—a third of all the city's population—were preparing. The chants of "The people, united, will never be defeated" rang out as the deputies for the Popular Unity and the government to bring about liberation and socialism. As it turned out, the Allende government soon became bogged down hopelessly in the courts, the parliament and the rest of the bureaucracy, while the ruling class whose pro-Allende treasury department prepared to use the armed forces which they had always relied on to crush the Allende government and its institutions which had been designed and used for centuries to oppress the people and use this government to bring about liberation and socialism. As it turned out, the Allende government to its sorrow could clearly prove the fact that it is guns and not elections that determines which class holds power...all over and the world of the 20th century and which, faced in Chile, was fighting to the death to defend its government. Such questions and many others remain without any answer from those who continue to pretend that under the Allende government there was a real attempt to establish socialism in Chile..."
General Strike Sweeps Colombia

On September 14, all the major cities of Colombia were paralyzed by a general strike, called to commemorate the third anniversary of the 1976 general strike. That event, when 1.5 million people took to the streets, was the biggest in Colombia's history. The new strike was called to protest the government's handling of economic problems and the increased hardship faced by workers.

The strike affected all sectors of the economy, from factories to shops to schools. It was led by the General Union of Workers (UGT) and the Central Union of Workers (CUT). The strike was coordinated by the National Strike Commission, which included representatives from all major labor unions.

The strike was a huge success, with millions of workers participating. It was the biggest strike in Colombia's history, and it lasted for three days. The government was forced to negotiate with the unions, and a new contract was signed that included some significant improvements for workers.

The strike was also a significant political victory for the left in Colombia. It showed that the people were willing to stand up for their rights and that they were prepared to take action when they felt that they were wronged.

Despite its success, the strike was not without controversy. Some critics argued that it was too focused on economic issues and not enough on political ones. Others argued that it was too confrontational and that it could lead to greater turmoil in the country.

But总体来说，the strike was a huge success, and it showed the strength of the Colombian workers. It was a clear victory for the left, and it gave them a boost going into the upcoming presidential election.
Mr. U.S.O. Inspects the Troops

"We're on the road to China. And since there is so much to see from sea to China Sea, We'll sample one from column A, and one from column B. It's neat on the road to China!"

Imperialism isn't funny. Revisionism is even sillier. Just how unfair it is to make disgustingly evident last week as NBC aired its three-hour program, "On the Road to China." The sight of this nummified imperialist warship with the Great Wall, with a golf club in his hand and a "Mao cap" mockingly on his head, singing his patriotic dream songs from column A, and one from column B, was more than most people could take.

"I gave my wife a ride to the hotel from the airport," quipped Hope. "Twice I fell off the handlebars. How an American comedian would be standing here in Tien An Men Square saying whatever he pleased? In those days the People's Republic was the Red Menace, the stern and implacable enemy. But in this fast-moving world, radical changes can occur overnight. So here I am!"

Hope, the god of power of revisionism had cleared the path for his chauvinistic road show. And the Chinese communists and government officials who flocked to see him lapped up his imperialist version of "friendship," Bob Hope dresses up like a feudal lord, towing students of the Peking Ballet School behind him. They are near the Summer Palace, on the deck of a marble boat built by an empress of the Ching Dynasty with money that was supposed to go toward building a naval fleet to defend China against imperialist plunder. The boat is a permanent symbol of national betrayal. The imperial thunder of "Hail, Britannia!" fills the air, and then Lord Hope and his crew break into a Gilbert and Sullivan song and dance routine from H.M.S. Pinafore, a musical about the heyday of British imperialism. Of course, the Chinese students dutifully approved the orchestrated merger of imperialism and egoism that has marked Hope's whole career and made him the favorite representative of U.S. capitalism.

All of this was conscious symbolism combined with the most blatant, nauseating chauvinism imaginable. One audience member was going through the minds of the Chinese masses viewing this scene from the adjacent park. They wouldn't even have to be class conscious; the slightest trace of national self-esteem among them would have caused them to be repelled by the obnoxious spectacle.

But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war.

"We're on the road to China. But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war. The road show was extremely successful brainwashing by thirty years of anti-communism and anti-communism, so successful that even people in China's masses viewing this scene from the adjacent park. They wouldn't even have to be class conscious; the slightest trace of national self-esteem among them would have caused them to be repelled by the obnoxious spectacle.

But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war.

"We're on the road to China. But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war. The road show was extremely successful brainwashing by thirty years of anti-communism and anti-communism, so successful that even people in China's masses viewing this scene from the adjacent park. They wouldn't even have to be class conscious; the slightest trace of national self-esteem among them would have caused them to be repelled by the obnoxious spectacle.

But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war. The road show was extremely successful brainwashing by thirty years of anti-communism and anti-communism, so successful that even people in China's masses viewing this scene from the adjacent park. They wouldn't even have to be class conscious; the slightest trace of national self-esteem among them would have caused them to be repelled by the obnoxious spectacle.

But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war. The road show was extremely successful brainwashing by thirty years of anti-communism and anti-communism, so successful that even people in China's masses viewing this scene from the adjacent park. They wouldn't even have to be class conscious; the slightest trace of national self-esteem among them would have caused them to be repelled by the obnoxious spectacle.

But perhaps the program's producers avoided the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history and avoid the problem by lifting a page from China's pre-iberation history. Indeed. The rise to power of revisionism in the last years of the war. The road show was extremely successful brainwashing by thirty years of anti-communism and anti-communism, so successful that even people in China's masses viewing this scene from the adjacent park. They wouldn't even have to be class conscious; the slightest trace of national self-esteem among them would have caused them to be repelled by the obnoxious spectacle.
Khomeini-Bazargan Regime

On September 9, U.S. embassy officials offered to return to Iran. But the message of this one was “look on the brighter side! You can’t be sure! Haven’t we heard for months from the U.S. government that Iran’s situation was nothing but foul and evil? We’ve heard official stories about how it has prevented for months, 750,000 arms and will leave Americans standing in gas lines forever; how the loss of strategic interest to the dollar has threatened U.S. national security; how the revolution accomplished no more than a state of madness.

Now all of a sudden in an apparent turnaround we are told to take a more “balanced” view. The September 9 embassy statement outlines a number of major changes in immediate and long-term U.S. interests are being met by the Iranian government and it states that there are many Iranians “who appreciate the need for an American connection.” So here emerges a picture of the continuing U.S. role in Iran—a self-portrait which shows the U.S., while dealing the blows by the people’s revolution, still with a lot of room to maneuver, as well as a willingness to regain its old kingly top position.

When the first round of Iran’s revolution ended the rule of the Shah’s despotism, it wasn’t fully clear to the U.S. if the people would be able to come to terms with the new revolution. How far the new rulers would be pushed into carrying out anti-imperialist policies. But the ultimate goal of these new rulers was more than a capitalist state with traditional, even fanatical, modern trappings, and some feudalism to boot. Pushing toward that goal and that further by further revolution, the Khomeini-Bazargan government is increasingly being driven to work on its common interest with imperialism—a development the U.S. ruling class is more than eager to promote and exploit.

Into Oil Imperialists’ Grip

The U.S. embassy officials happily cited this to mean that the U.S. is virtually unchanged. While Iranian oil production has dropped from a total of 6 million barrels a day to 2.9 million, the portion being exported from a total of 6 million barrels a day to 9 million is still significant. Iran’s rulers are determined to pursed the case against the U.S. and yet also remains charged with 25 counts of both arms, and yet also remains charged with 25 counts of both arms, while the new rulers of Iran remain committed to providing a steady supply of oil to the U.S.

Khomeini agreeing to provide a regular stream of oil to the U.S. is an example of the new rulers of Iran’s willingness to cut back on Iran’s oil exports to regain its old kingly lop position. The U.S. has backed the Khomeini government, while trying to regain its own influence in this situation.

The U.S. has backed the Khomeini government, while trying to regain its own influence in this situation.

The U.S. has backed the Khomeini government, while trying to regain its own influence in this situation.

Daylight

Continued from page 1

 Suppress Identification Testimony, aimed at protecting all out-of-court identifications, is a serious matter. Any in-court identification the prosecution may seek to make during the trial itself. The motion points out that the arrests on the 29th were “made completely out of court” and that the defendants were arrested solely because of their proximity to officers at the time the use was made. It says that the defendants overwhelmingly related to supposed assaults—this is illegal.

Following these arrests, an array of 49 photographs attached to a large 1-foot by 1-foot photo, showing the defendants confused and victimized and the prisoners were being arrested. The motion also states that the illegal line-ups and the illegal arrests, illegal procedures carried out at the preliminary hearings of the 78, and further illegalities in the method of obtaining identification (both through the photo line-ups and out-of-court identification) are calls for the suppression of this all said “evidence” and for a court ruled by the defendants identified by a single witness, either in the four days of line-ups or the weeks of viewing photo displays. One man who remains completely unidentified as having been at the demonstration, and yet also remains charged with...
Bob Avakian: It is possible to create and maintain a government that actually doesn't become a tool in the hands of new masters who are more or less objective. We know from the experience in Russia and China, that you have all the vesting of the system, in the hands of the people's thinking. It's a very big step to be able to overcome a lot of those divisions that are left over. The majority of people are kept out of political affairs. If you go to work 10 hours a day and you go home and the sound of the machine is pounding in your ears, "You'd better go to sleep and then you get up again every day, it's dehumanizing. Under this system, the conditions of life prevent people from becoming really politically aware and active. The media in some countries that they're allowed, to, "vote for this or vote for that" which is meaningless. It's meaningless.

There is a real task under socialism of drawing millions of people into political life. For example somebody called up me and said I didn't think it was St. Louis. It was a common question, "If you were in power, I would not be even allowed to criticize you." Finally I just got tired of it and I said, I'm going to have a talk with people like you would be getting you to criticize us. Because if you go along, and all the talks that you have critically, you'll put up with anything. In fact, once we were the authorities you would just unconditionally go along with that." That's the real problem—indoctrination, conditioning and force of habit that whoever's in author-

I mean that's what people used to say when the Vietnamese were there. I can remember 15 years ago being in this same situation: You go on the radio show, you're operated by war; people would say up, and say, "How old are you?"

"What do you know about Vietnam? Their people have never known what they know they're doing, da-da-da-da. And it's not up to us to challenge them or question them. Just go along. You know, "That's for them to do and for you to carry out." Getting people to break with that is a big struggle because the force of habit is to go along with whoever is in author-

Like I told some people at a meeting of many Party members and supporters last night, "You don't realize how fortunate we are. You don't see the good aspect when we go out, and some people curse us, you all yell at us and tell us you can't say it. But if we want to get anything done we have to win people to it. We have to convince them that they can't live without this. And yet once you come in to actual power, you'll realize it."

...Questioner: When you have the power.

B.A.: Yeah, but it isn't even so much the power. It's more the habit; it's the authority. I mean there is a power question but it's also that people need to be able to exercise authority and not questioning it and sitting back, not saying, "You're the people, the society where a handful of people do the thinking and make the decisions.

Some people will say, "I'd rather have it that way. It's too much trouble." I disagree with that. To overcome that is not an easy thing.

Experience shows that people can be drawn into that process but it's a struggle. And don't forget that people wanted to resist it because they benefit from the division in society. They benefit from occupying a privileged position and they resist any effort to keep moving things forward and chip away at that.

You see it all the time. With every kind of intellectual position you see people resisting, whether it's a doctor or an artist or whatever it is, resisting any idea they have anything to learn from taking part in the same experiences as workers... They don't really have an all-around view. You know this division of labor cripples everybody, part of it. If you only are your mind, your mind also doesn't develop fully. And obviously if you can use your hands, use your mind is not allowed to develop.

...Questioner: What do you mean by the withering away of the state—a classless society?

B.A.: That is like a long term goal. I basically agree that we agree with Marx that to get to that point requires a long period of transition during which you have to have a dictatorship of the pro-

You need this until you've overcome, the heroes and villains, the social divisions left over from the old society, like those between the workers and the peasants, between intellectuals and workers and so on. And until you've developed the economic level of the point where you don't have to have commodity production any longer, you can only say it's in the level of state ownership; and until you've really eliminated the thinking of the people. You've got to have some form of administration. The state as I understand it means an organ of sup-

In other words you draw the workers into political life. You develop mass forms for the workers to actually administer society.

You remodel the thinking of the people. You uproot the material basis for classes to exist or be re-enforced, for those who would exploit the old state apparatus. Then, as you're doing all this, you're drawing millions of people into administration that move away from being organs of repression. At that point then the state as such—in other words, as a government apparatus for the purpose of class oppressing—another—will no longer exist. But new forms of administration will be transformed to a new place. That's several centuries ahead.

GOON ATTACK BACKFIRES IN HAWAII

A sharp battle in the nationwide fight to defend Revolutionary Communist Party Chairman Bob Avakian and all the other Mao Tsetung Defendants has erupted in Hawaii. On Tuesday, August 28, members of the Committee to Free the Mao Tsetung Defendants and the National United Workers Organization (NUWO) meeting the following night, workers took up the defense of the Party Chairman and the other Mao Defendants.

As workers poured out of the service entrance at the Sheraton, security guards took their positions. A NUWO member had been beaten up by these goons the day before, and now 15 goons stood ready for the order to attack.

Suddenly a woman leafletter was dragged onto Sheraton property. When others moved to defend her, all hell broke loose. Men and women were dragged to the ground. As they fought back to free themselves, suddenly a 300-pound hired killer went berserk. He attacked a leafletter, grabbed her neck with a club and then with full force he drove the piece of lumber into a woman’s face, splitting it open and breaking bones. Four others were sent to the hospital.

Contrary to the image promoted by Sheraton of “happy smiling servants” full of “aloha spirit,” Sheraton is a hellhole sweatshop. Hundreds of immigrants from the Philippines, Korea and Samoa work at this affiliate of ITT in back-breaking and menial jobs like busboy, dishwasher, maid and laundry worker.

Over the past months, the influence of the Party among the workers has spread. Many had been regularly leafleting among and spreading the struggle over political questions between workers had been common in the halls and rooms of the Sheraton. Some had contributed to the Party’s million dollar fund drive and had attended the recent speech of Chairman Avakian. Hotel management was clearly out for blood and determined to check the Party’s growing influence.

The attack on the 28th was witnessed by several workers who quickly spread word of what they had seen. Sheraton management then tried to enforce a series of ridiculous lies in response. Many others spoke out and continued to check the Party’s growing influence.

The attack on the 28th was witnessed by several workers who quickly spread word of what they had seen. Sheraton management then tried to enforce a series of ridiculous lies in response. Many others spoke out and continued to check the Party’s growing influence.

The ultimate result of Sheraton’s vicious attack earlier in the week was just the opposite of the hotel’s intentions. Instead of isolating the Party, the effect has been just the opposite: the struggle to defend the Party Chairman and the Mao Defendants has grown broader than ever.

Actress Suicide

Jean Seberg died of an overdose of barbiturates in Paris, France. This had not been the first suicide attempt by Seberg who was driven half mad by FBI harassment. Her death means that the following is true: the ruffians who attacked the leafletters, gave $250 to the RCP’s million dollar fund drive and had attended the recent speech of Chairman Avakian. Hotel management was determined to check the Party’s growing influence.

The attack on the 28th was witnessed by several workers who quickly spread word of what they had seen. Sheraton management then tried to enforce a series of ridiculous lies in response. Many others spoke out and continued to check the Party’s growing influence.

The ultimate result of Sheraton’s vicious attack earlier in the week was just the opposite of the hotel’s intentions. Instead of isolating the Party, the effect has been just the opposite: the struggle to defend the Party Chairman and the Mao Defendants has grown broader than ever.

As leafletters from the Honolulu chapter of the National United Workers Organization and the Committee to Free the Mao Tsetung Defendants called on workers to take up the defense of the RCP, they were viciously attacked by goons from the Sheraton-Waikiki Hotel.

The goal of the Sheraton’s actions had made the nationwide attack on the Party a sharp question in the area. At the highly successful meeting of the Committee to Free the Mao Tsetung Defendants, one worker reported how the leafletters were returning to the Sheraton. Some had contributed to the Party’s million dollar fund drive and had attended the recent speech of Chairman Avakian. Hotel management was determined to check the Party’s growing influence.

The ultimate result of Sheraton’s vicious attack earlier in the week was just the opposite of the hotel’s intentions. Instead of isolating the Party, the effect has been just the opposite: the struggle to defend the Party Chairman and the Mao Defendants has grown broader than ever.

Early this month well-known actress Jean Seberg died of an overdose of barbiturates in Paris, France. This had not been the first suicide attempt by Seberg who was driven half mad by FBI harassment. Her death means that the following is true: the ruffians who attacked the leafletters, gave $250 to the RCP’s million dollar fund drive and had attended the recent speech of Chairman Avakian. Hotel management was determined to check the Party’s growing influence.

The ultimate result of Sheraton’s vicious attack earlier in the week was just the opposite of the hotel’s intentions. Instead of isolating the Party, the effect has been just the opposite: the struggle to defend the Party Chairman and the Mao Defendants has grown broader than ever.

As leafletters from the Honolulu chapter of the National United Workers Organization and the Committee to Free the Mao Tsetung Defendants called on workers to take up the defense of the RCP, they were viciously attacked by goons from the Sheraton-Waikiki Hotel.

The goal of the Sheraton’s actions had made the nationwide attack on the Party a sharp question in the area. At the highly successful meeting of the Committee to Free the Mao Tsetung Defendants, one worker reported how the leafletters were returning to the Sheraton. Some had contributed to the Party’s million dollar fund drive and had attended the recent speech of Chairman Avakian. Hotel management was determined to check the Party’s growing influence.

The ultimate result of Sheraton’s vicious attack earlier in the week was just the opposite of the hotel’s intentions. Instead of isolating the Party, the effect has been just the opposite: the struggle to defend the Party Chairman and the Mao Defendants has grown broader than ever.

Premature labor, necessitating the emergency delivery of the child. The baby died three days later. Each year around the time of the baby’s death, she attempted to end her life. This year she finally succeeded.

Given the fact that many recent “revelations” concerning the work of the FBI in the late ’60s and early ’70s have been publicly introduced with similar statements by Webster and others (i.e., “We’re out of this business forever . . .”), the inquisitive reader will wonder “Yeah, then what business are we in?” In reality, the government’s intentions in releasing information about the FBI’s harassment of people has been two-fold. On the one hand, it has served to polish up the tarnished image of the FBI and, on the other hand, it is intended as a warning to anyone who the FBI may well “neutralize” in the future.
Mohammed Nur Taraki, the central figure in a 1978 Soviet-backed coup d'état, was reportedly killed on Friday, September 14 as he presided over a meeting of the country's ruling body in the capital city of Kabul. While details are still sketchy, reports indicate that Taraki's assassination blasted away, hitting him nine times. 60 others were either killed or injured. The number 2 man in the government, and until last Friday, a close associate of Taraki who was killed when a mutiny at the Balahisar prison at Aznar in Kunar province, in the east. The governor of the country, already heavy, made a leap. Further, the Soviets quickly recipro-cations with different countries and "especially with the Soviet Union." Under the banner of supporting "revolution" and opposing "counter-revolution," the regime has sought to capture the imagination of the Afghan people. This was indicated by Amin who, the following Monday, pledged gold foreign ex-ations with different countries and "especially with the Soviet Union." Many Afghan advisors were killed when a mutiny at the Balahisar prison at Aznar in Kunar province, in the east. The governor of the country, already heavy, made a leap. The Kabul government only serve to highlight the major supply route for Russian arms
m the country have all sent their equipment. The situation was complete
In late August, 30 Russian "tourists" in a group of butchers is notorious for its constant guerrilla warfare. There are some 28 provinces of Afghanistan have been the scene of mass armed uprisings, as well as more constant ground warfare. There are reported to be ten separate guerrilla
The KGB (Soviet version of the CIA) has helped the regime set up its counterparts within Afghanistan, called AGSA (Organization for Defense of the Masses of Afghan People). This group of butchers borrows from 30 hours a
A thick brown layer of eye-searing, choking smog shrouded the Los Angeles basin into a giant gas chamber. People collapsed on the street and choked. The city of Los Angeles lost over 2 million automobiles, each spewing out poisons. This is a city once billed as the American dream come true, a never-ending suburb with 2 cars in every garage. Last week, L.A. had its worst smog in 24 years.
A thick brown layer of eye-searing, choking smog shrouded the Los Angeles basin into a giant gas chamber. People collapsed on the street and choked. The city of Los Angeles lost over 2 million automobiles, each spewing out poisons. This is a city once billed as the American dream come true, a never-ending suburb with 2 cars in every garage. Last week, L.A. had its worst smog in 24 years.
Big Stake
The Soviets have a big stake in Afghanistan. Immediately after the 78 coup, Soviet capital investment in the country, already heavy, made a leap. Today, about 30% of the country are sold to the Soviet Union at prices far below world levels. More important, however, is the Soviets' political stake in the area as they contend with the U.S. for spheres of influence.

Soviets in Hot Water in Afghanistan

A key element of the Soviet strategy in the area has for some time been access to the Indian Ocean. Although Afghan-has no coastline, the southern part of the country is bordering on Persichistan, an area which spans from Iran to Pakistan and does have an Indian Gulf of Oman coast. Not coincidentally, the Soviets have been putting in an "independent Baluchistan," all sorts of encourage the Baluchi people to separate from Iran and Pakistan. The area would then be brought into the Soviet orbit, thus completing the Soviets' southward path to the
The air is to the advisor who control most of the armories and ammunition dumps in Afghanistan, the Soviets have provided the entire ammunition needs of the military, along with 100 MiG-21 jets, thirty combat helicopters, about 700 tanks, more than a thousand armored personnel carriers, and a whole range of heavy, long-range guns to Kalashnikov automatic rifles. All of this has been used exclusively against the Afghan people.

Iran

The KGB (Soviet version of the CIA) has helped the regime set up its counterparts within Afghanistan, called AGSA (Organization for Defense of the Masses of Afghan People). This group of butchers borrows from 30 hours a
A thick brown layer of eye-searing, choking smog shrouded the Los Angeles basin into a giant gas chamber. People collapsed on the street and choked. The city of Los Angeles lost over 2 million automobiles, each spewing out poisons. This is a city once billed as the American dream come true, a never-ending suburb with 2 cars in every garage. Last week, L.A. had its worst smog in 24 years.
A thick brown layer of eye-searing, choking smog shrouded the Los Angeles basin into a giant gas chamber. People collapsed on the street and choked. The city of Los Angeles lost over 2 million automobiles, each spewing out poisons. This is a city once billed as the American dream come true, a never-ending suburb with 2 cars in every garage. Last week, L.A. had its worst smog in 24 years.

Big Stake
The Soviets have a big stake in Afghanistan. Immediately after the 78 coup, Soviet capital investment in the country, already heavy, made a leap. Today, about 30% of the country are sold to the Soviet Union at prices far below world levels. More important, however, is the Soviets' political stake in the area as they contend with the U.S. for spheres of influence.
V- - --

Chicago's Pilsen

ARCHITECT

To the Revolutionary Worker,

As a resident of Pilsen, Chicago, I am deeply indebted to a recent article published in the Architecture column of the Chicago Sun-Times, called "Take a walk through Pilsen," for having opened my eyes to the valuable artistic treasures which up until now have gone unnoticed and unappreciated by us residents of Pilsen. We were convinced that we lived in a typical, run-down barrio which has for generations housed immigrant workers of different nationalities. But this meant nothing more than in the words of the author of the article I had always thought, "at least 100 years of Chicago architecture. Victorian, Romanesque, Greek Revival, and Beaux Arts Eclectic!"

Imagine my surprise as I realized how narrow I was to feel outrage at the living conditions of neighborhoods such as Pilsen. How misguided I have been—that Pilsen was just nothing but street after street of crumbling or half burned-out, boarded-up buildings, of trash strewn all over the sidewalks and gutters, of one pot hole after another, sidewalks which suddenly break off into deep holes that go all the way down to the water table. Otherwise car traffic is plow shows up. Occasionally, the snow plow clears the sidewalks. Occasionally, the snow plow clears the sidewalks. Occasionally, the snow plow clears the sidewalks.

But I guess that as long as we can get up every morning and look out our window at "terribly crafted cornices and moldings..."

Somehow in the shuffle the author of the Sun-Times article forgot all the underground sewers which face onto basic brick!

Our bourgeois expert on architecture points out the "art deco glass facades" and "most spectacular are the complex rows of iron webbed fire escapes on the street side, which recall the 19th Century character that Pilsen continues to hold onto." What a thrill it is to be living in a fire-prone neighborhood where every year and especially in the winter of 1977 people die in fires due to insurance arson and the deteriorated conditions of the houses with ancient wiring and space heaters—with fire escapes more than one hundred years old! Oh yes, the way that you can tell the houses that are over 100 years old is that the entrances are below street level—the simple joys of living below the sewers to prevent flooding.

Our author gushes, "And there is more. The side streets in Pilsen have as many delicate and alluring masterpieces of exceptional architectural quality as any North Side neighborhood..." I am amazed that he missed the particularly distinctive character of these side streets during the winter months. Then they are festooned with ice upon ice of hard as rock snow which turns black within days, greatly adding to the overall quaintness by making travel almost impossible—truly reminiscent of centuries past—by completely covering all the cars parked along the street, as well as the sidewalks. Occasionally, the snow plow shows up. Otherwise car traffic is impossible because of the packed snow.
almost impossible for weeks at a time as the streets take on the aspect of remote country roads.

Like the story of the blind men who each grabbed hold of a different part of an elephant, the den of racists from the Western imperialists and the U.S. is something other than what it really was, our architect is blinded to reality by his bourgeois expertise. Not only does he miss seeing the people who are referred to euphemistically: "On any sunny afternoon, the street is alive with excitement and color," but he even sees the houses as idealized forms. He does not grasp the content of life in Pilsen.

Oh wait, but doesn't he say that "the best way however to enjoy Pilsen is to look at the neighborhood as a neighborhood." And in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution. Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop (the downtown business district)"! Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!

He is quite an observant fellow, passing over the murals with symbols of U.S. imperialism, octopus-like, skull and crossbones, and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop! "Hungrily, our tourist eyes the neighborhood." And "in this sense, a lot has to be said about the newly acquired Latino contribution." Ah... a liberal. "The Mexican-Americans of the area have supplied a rewarding cultural definition that is evident in Pilsen's charm and beauty, from the countless murals throughout the neighborhood to the burgeoning Latin restaurants, bookstores, craft shops and specialty stores—all within sight of the Loop!" Hungry, our tour eyes the scene. What! Mention the predominantly Latin and Mexican workers and unemployed who make up the residents of Pilsen? That would put a dent in the peaceful, smart and sophisticated picture he has gone to such great effort to present!
Iran

Continued from page 8

been in favor of resuming the flow of arms, but there has been some hesitancy within the government questioning whether the masses would buy it. Now, they can stir up enough hysteria around them with the "agents of saez" and "proletarian communists" in Kurdistan who want to destroy "national unity" as their justification for U.S. arms the Shah used to murder tens of thousands only a year ago. It is now the reactionary Khomeini government would be driven to take even more drastic measures. They're stuck with us on military supplies because of their large inventories and many large joint projects and, of course, with their self-deifying "for us not to do business with you is tantamount to a declaration of war." The U.S. embargo statement proudly and naively proclaimed.

Only the contracts for new and additional supplies to U.S. arms centers among allied states were temporarily interrupted by the revolution. Spare parts ordered by the imperialists, Khomeini declared a limited amnesty for those who admitted their chickens and agents of the Shah's regime who had escaped execution even though the masses were still demanding the Shah's executioners receive the punishment they deserved. Prime Minister Bazargan acknowledged that the government was trying to build up strength. If the U.S. rulers' standpoint, many of these periods would provide a solid for a full-scale comeback.

In the meantime U.S. interests are actively promoted by a host of agents working covertly in and around the government. Prominent among these is foreign minister Yazdi who rushed to aid U.S. ambassador Sullivan when the embassy was under siege during the February insurrection. His position in charge of security matters is undoubtedly of key importance to the imperialists.

Yazdi has access to the most sophisticated surveillance equipment left in Iran that is in the responsibility of wrapping up SAVAK's affairs has made him privy to the still unresolved treachery hidden in the legend of the Shah's "men of honor". But he is instrumental in recruiting the "revolutionary guards," Khomeini's only reliable armed force. With these credentials, U.S. imperialism can gainly feel assured that the necessary arrangements they made when the Shah fell to protect the existence of the military and intelligence apparatus which is so key to the strategic interests of the U.S. as face of the imperialists and around the world.

The new Iranian government is not fully to the U.S.'s liking—they loved the murdering Shah and his gang far more than the recent embassy statement shows, they are growing more and more anxious to make the best of it. In a situation which is not stabilizing, the U.S. is all too happy to back a government which is more and more anti-imperialist.

The U.S. and other imperialists are particularly anxious to smash the revolutionary Left. Since the old revolutionary forces don't have the clout to do so now, Khomeini's government is today the best thing around for this job. And while it does its dirty work, the U.S. imperialists are giving them more "reliable" reactionsaries a chance to breathe and build up strength. If the U.S.-Khomeini relationship doesn't pan out as smoothly as they would hope, they are right now laying the groundwork for a still more blatantly reactionary regime.

El Salvador

Continued from page 1

the last week alone.

It seems that the U.S. may well consider revolution in El Salvador to be even more dangerous than in Nicaragua. This was indicated in a report smuggled out of El Salvador to the New York Times which stated that, "In many ways the situation is different than that existing in Nicaragua before General Somoza's overthrow, not the least because of the Left in El Salvador is trying to establish an entire social and economic system and not just our family industry."

In El Salvador, forces opposed to Romero have speculated that Washington may attempt to force the dictator to resign or may even promote a coup to replace him with a government lacking Romero's tarnished image. Whatever, it is clear that the purpose of any potential move is to maintain U.S. imperialist domination, leaving the Salvadoran military intact as a dependable tool to suppress the people. And, according to the press, sources in the U.S. government have stated that if nothing else works, direct U.S. military intervention remains a distinct possibility.

But it's clear the U.S. and whatever allies they may gain in El Salvador will have their hands full trying to hold back the revolutionary uprisings of the Salvadoran people. Among the chaos in the September 14 demonstrations, "No to elections—long live the insurrection!"
Rhodesia

Continued from page 13

the rigged constitutional deck to deal themselves a more favorable hand. By focusing the debate on the question of “safeguards” that existed nominally granted black “majority rule” and “safeguards” for white people are absolutely vital,” he said bluntly. “We have the blackmail mechanism, and it works.”

But in spite of the imperialists’ similar concerns, conference chairman Lord Carrington has his hands full attempting to maintain the delicate balance of power in the conference. In a special message to the various parties to this affair and trying to smooth out the very real contradictions between them. White settler chieflain Ian Smith has already threatened to split the puppet delegation headed by Ian Smith, who told the British in opening speech to the conference, emphasized his willingness to “work together with the Muzorewa-Smith government.”

In a recent interview, Muzorewa openly begged Rhodesian officials in Whitehall to join Muzorewa’s government, men to join Muzorewa’s government, or take his place. Clearly, the future of the Zimbabwean people’s struggle will be strongly affected by the stand the guerrilla leaders take. The masses will be watching closely to see whether the police launched a full-scale attack as Barricades block every intersection along the two-mile strip. Whittier Blvd., where for decades Chicano youth have been locked down. In National City, over 500 police, long notorious for their stranglehold on the armed power of the state. These are the real underlings of the imperialists and the national and class oppression of the Zimbabwean masses.

Rhodesia

Continued from page 13

The ruins don’t come up there so much.” And they don’t limit their provocation to youth. Just after the boulevard was closed, an older Chicoan, a theater owner, was pulled over for a trumped-up traffic violation and kicked to the ground in front of his son.

These attacks on Chicos are not going unawarded. On Whittier Blvd., over 70 of the 200 merchants in the area exercised circular petitions to fight the closure. In National City, over 500 members of car clubs, including one Black and one white club, met to plan a counterattack. “If they’re going to make war on us, we’ll make war on them,” one club member vowed. The barriers are a time bomb and the cops know it.

Several youths have told the RCP in East Los Angeles police have used their hallucinogenic youth about staying away from communists and instruct them to tear down the RCP poster about Bob Avakian’s speech, “To All Those Who Refuse to Live and Die on East Los Angeles sheriff patrols have used their bullhorns to lecture youth about staying away from communists and instruct them to tear down the RCP poster about Bob Avakian’s speech, “To All Those Who Refuse to Live and Die on East Los Angeles.

Today, by shutting down Whittier Blvd. and the other cruising strips, the sheriffs are delivering a reminder from the ruling class to Chicanos: You may own an old Chevy or even an El Dorado, but the streets belong to us.
They only disagreed with the UAW sheviks who split from the RCP a while back. A decent contract can actually be won if leadership on what it would take to win elements, landlords who wish to throw in the towel (as the votecontrol door) to their "historic compromise" strategy for contending with the U.S. while the RCP's own situation isn't clear, in turn, this is what made the U.S. imperialists so determined to put a stop to it.

The ugly fact is that for the Soviets and the U.S. to play CP, the Allende government was expendable. That's why they put so much emphasis on deliberate disarming, demobilizing and demoralizing the masses—so that when the U.S. made its move it would all be over quickly and the CP could soon return to "business as usual" in what they thought would be the key position of power along with the Christian Democrats. But at the same time, that's also why the U.S. was forced to go for such a bloody coup, such an open breach of the rules of the game,—in order to thoroughly smash the CP and its pro-Soviet plans, as well as to sow the seeds of the mass movement which in many ways was breaking out of the bowels of the Allende government and trying to put it on. The USSR had nothing to lose—and the U.S. had an enormous need to win.

Palacios concludes his book like this: "Our intention in this book was none other than to analyze and expose the role played by the falsifiers of Marxism and by falsified socialism in the tragedy of the Chilean people, to analyze and expose the way these falsifiers have disguised the main enemy and advance toward the destruction of the U.S. imperialism's objectives, and to warn all those who are interested in revolutionary struggle in the world of the issues raised by this important struggle in Chile."

Further complications for the Soviets lie in the fact that the U.S. is clearly at war with the "socialist" countries, and that by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government. One interesting point: the Allende government was replaced by the Soviet-backed "Socialist" government, and by falsifying the struggle in Chile, the imperialists have been able to make a very nice loyal opposition to the Allende government.